Health Information Exchange

With our aging population, increased use of medications and growing number of patients with more than one chronic disease, exchanging health information between dental and medical providers in a timely manner is important for optimal care. Dental care is only infrequently integrated with medical care and medical electronic health records system, which may result in less access to important health information for dental clinicians.

Please help us determine how health information exchange is currently taking place in the dental community by taking our 5-question poll.
